Gray Technologies Press Publishes Second Title Rocking in a Free World A collection of poems on Freedom

Bel Air, Maryland – December 7, 2006 – Gray Technologies Press, an independent publisher of original works of literary art by new artists, is pleased to announce the completion of its second published title, Rocking in a Free World. This publication follows the ground breaking epic, The Hounds of Love, moving on from the timeless topic of love to the timely topic of freedom in the modern world.

Rocking in a Free World is a collection of poems on freedom. The book is divided into four chapters on independence, journey, struggle, and celebration. Each chapter explores one of these topics with respect to freedom. Independence cultivates freedom. Journey leads to freedom's evolution. Struggle is inevitable and constant. Conflicts occur at so many levels within and between societies, but in all cases there is celebration of the victories through art. In a world of free will, freedom is a priceless natural resource without ownership. Rocking in a Free World combines various elements of artistic expression with historical bearing and recent global events in a poetic articulation of the development of pure freedom in a human context

The author, Mark Allen Gray, holds a Master of Science degree in computer science from Johns Hopkins University. Since childhood, Mark has been an avid student of literature and enjoys writing, in particular, capturing and condensing life events and emotions into poems. Mark's style draws on the creative, logical, and technical elements of computer science in his professional life and blends them with the raw emotional events and experiences of his personal life. Mark's major literary and poetic influences include Ernest Hemingway, John Steinbeck, Jack Kerouac, Jim Morrison, and Charles Baudelaire.

About Gray Technologies Press

Gray Technologies Press is a small independent publisher of original works of literary art in print and digital formats. The focus of the press is on the development of new artists and the application of new publishing technologies on their original works. The primary goal of the press is to maximize the accessibility, utility, and quality of their products while minimizing the cost of these products to consumers. According to the president, Mark Gray, "We continue to strive to meet our goal by persistent research, development, and application of new publishing technologies and methods. We work with new artists to best express and transform their works into new creations of word, sight, and sound worthy of sharing with the world."
